AGED CITIZEN PASSES AWAY.

E. M. Bartles Dies At His Home
On The East Side Sunday
Morning—Lived Here
Nearly Twenty-
Four Years.

REMAINS TAKEN TO OLD HOME.

After being in ill health for a lengthy time E. M. Bartles, one of the most honorable and oldest citizens of Cloverport, found relief in death Sunday morning. Mr. Bartles' condition had been feeble for sometime and for the last few years he had not been actively engaged in business.

Mr. Bartles was born in Jonesboro, Tenn., September 3, 1839. The greater part of his life was spent in Meade county, where he made his home at Paradise Bottom and in 1875 he moved to Sterrett's Bottom where he lived many years. From there he moved to this place in 1885, and has always been a conservative and honest citizen. He was in the Union army one year. After he came here he followed the trade of carpenter.

October 5, 1888, he married Miss Abigail Crecelius, who with three children survive, Mrs. Medora Sterrett, Frank Bartles and Mrs. John Ross. Mr. Bartles was a kind, good husband and loving father. He was a peaceful and unselfish neighbor and had many warm friends in Cloverport.

The remains were taken Sunday afternoon on the boat to Crecelius for interment in the family cemetery. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Ross, John Sterrett and Mrs. Bartles, who will return home in a week's time.

Appointed Delegates.

Mrs. A. C. Tanner, Mrs. Fred Perry, and Mrs. A. N. Simons were appointed delegates by the Ladies Society of the Presbyterian church to attend the Ladies' Missionary meeting which convenes March 17 at the Presbyterian church at Owensboro.

Miss Wroe has returned to her home in this city.

BEN JOHNSON

Named For Congress Again--
Democratic Committee Declares Him a Nominee.

Louisville, Ky., March 8.—The Hon. Ben Johnson was re-nominated for Congress from the Fourth District at noon today at a meeting of the Fourth Congressional Democratic Committee held at the Old Inn. Nine of the thirteen members of the committee were present, and the others were represented by proxy. The time for opposition to appear against Mr. Johnson expired some days ago, and, under the law, the committee declared him the nominee without opposition. This is the third time that Mr. Johnson has been so honored by his constituents, from the fourth district.

There was a good deal of talk among the members, outside of the committee room about Mr. Johnson's chances for the gubernatorial nomination, and all declared that it was their opinion that he would be nominated for Governor without opposition. After Mr. Johnson was declared the nominee for Congress the committee unanimously endorsed him for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

BRECKENRIDGE LOSES ANOTHER GOOD MAN.

C. C. Pile Dies At His Home In Southern Part Of The County
Last Week--Leaves A Large Family Well-Known.

BURIED IN HOME GRAVEYARD.

C. C. Pile, one of the best-known citizens of the southeastern part of the county, peacefully breathed his last at his home at Mook on Tuesday, March 1, after a nervous illness of a few weeks. The deceased was born May 10, 1841, near Buras, and was one of the many substantial citizens born in that section of the county in those days, there being seven such sons in his father's family, John, James M. and Isaac being the only ones now living.

At the age of twenty-six, Mr. Pile was married to Bettie A. Bruner, daughter of Joel Bruner, of Carter. Ten children were born to them. Eight of these, Joel H., of Hardinsburg; Mrs. Mollie Alexander of Custer; Gilbert, of Custer; Victor, of Liberty, Arizona; and Wade, Homer, Ora and Eliza, all of Mook, together with the mother, survive.

Mr. Pile was a successful farmer, producing the annual crop of corn and wheat, and his fertility increased under his cultivation. He was noted for his industry, preferring activity to quiet and knowing no rest except that which comes with sleep and observance of the Sabbath.

Kindness to neighbors, dispensing hospitality at his home, liberality in providing for his family, exerting his influence for higher living, studying his Bible and encouraging others to learn and obey its teachings, were cardinal features of his active life. He was a man whom his section will miss, one whose memory will remain, whose words are living testimony of an exalted manhood, whose good deeds are his greatest monument.

After brief and fitting funeral exercises, conducted by his neighbors and co-workers in good works, Revs. A. A. Smiley and H. T. Basham, this being his request, his six sons, Joel, Gilbert, Wade, Homer, Victor and Ora, tenderly bore the remains to the family burying ground on the brow of the hill, near the home he had built and in which he and his faithful wife had reared them, the Mecca to which they are always glad to return.

Police Court By Judge Willis
Created Much Interest.

The celebrated cow case, which has been in Judge Willis' court for the last six months, between W. N. Johnson, and Chas. Hawkins, went by the board last Monday. Both parties were there with their witnesses all lined up, and announced ready for trial. Johnson's attorney, asked that the defendant Hawkins, go ahead and prove his account. Johnson objected and said he didn't have to. He contended that he was not the plaintiff, and did not have to "lick the tiger." After considerable wrangling, Judge Willis put both parties out of court by dismissing the action without prejudice.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passages, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable about kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a booklet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonials received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

RAILWAY MAIL PAY

How much does the U. S. pay the railway for the use of these traveling Post Offices in such cases as just referred to?

The equivalent of one passenger fare per round trip.

Can you explain it in figures? Yes. The U. S. pays 5.5 cents per mile for the going trip, and two to six passengers in it—nothing for the return trip, which is the equal of 2.75 cents for the whole distance the car travels.

Why do you call the clerks passengers, and think the Government should pay for their carriage? Because the Government demands of the railroads the same care and responsibilities as accorded passengers. The men are furnished heat and ice-water and in case of accident the railroads are liable to the same extent as to passengers.

Is it possible you mean that the railroads get 5.5 cents for hauling a full car and in addition are obliged to furnish the Post Office Department with free tickets for say 4 men, worth 2.5 cents a mile each at tariff rate?

That is just what I mean. The railroads haul the car free, and pay 4.5 cents a mile for the privilege in such a case.

Why on earth do the railroads do this?

Perhaps they have never stopped to think how very foolish such a practice is. Maybe this will start them thinking.

How much do railroads receive per mile for hauling empty cars?

Diners, Parlor and Sleeping cars on their own wheels 12 to 20 cts. per mile. Passenger coaches 10 to 18 cents; Baggage and Express cars 8 to 12 cents; Freight cars 6 to 10 cents per mile.

Then the railroads receive on the average, for hauling various classes of cars on freight trains, from three to eight times as much as U. S. pays on these one-way runs for P. O. cars on passenger trains?

Correct.

Are P. O. cars any real value or service to railroads?

They are not, as their design is fixed by the department, and being post offices, are unfit to carry ordinary freight or baggage.

How much mail does each of these cars carry?

About what would take up one-eighth of an ordinary baggage car, or 2 tons.

How much more can one of these cars carry?

About 15 tons, if stripped of post office fittings.

What do express companies pay railroads for their privileges?

50 to 55 per cent of their gross receipts.

Do express companies assume all responsibility to its patrons?

Yes.

Do express companies get any extra facilities, such as enjoyed by P. O. free?

No. On the contrary they contribute toward salaries of station men and train baggage men; release the railroads from claims for personal injuries to employees, handle free to the railroads, remittances and railway express packages. The number of express employees carried on trains is much less than on P. O. cars.

Do express companies make money on the 45 to 50 per cent which is all they get out of their receipts?

They do.

It is stated above that U. S. pays only 50 per cent of gross receipts for railway transportation of mails, and yet the department is operated at a loss?

That's what the report of Post Master General shows.

What is the difference in the method of charging by the express companies and the post office department?

The former charges according to distance; the latter as you know carries letters or other mail matter under postage without regard to distance.

How does the dead weight of cars, carrying U. S. mail, compare with the weight of the mail hauled?

31.7 tons dead weight, to one ton of mail.

How is it with passengers? About the same.

And freight? 1.1 tons of dead weight to one ton of freight hauled.

Does U. S. pay rent for post office facilities, in cars used partly for baggage or express?

No. U. S. pays only when U. S. has the entire car, and as it then pays less than the fare of the clerks in it, if empty only 1 to 15 of what the railroads secure from the public for haul alone it is hard to find the rent.

Who decides when cars shall be exclusively post office?

U. S.

Who specifies the construction of post office cars?

U. S.

Who pays for them? The railroads.

Do cars, now specified by U. S. cost more than a few years ago?

Standard steel, weighing 108,000 lbs., cost about 60 per cent more.

Are post office facilities in apartment cars, and full cars, provided for the convenience of the railroads?

No indeed. Entirely for post office.

Over how many miles were these full and apartment cars hauled in 1907?

232 millions of miles.

What is average weight of mail, per car?

2.09 tons.

How much mail can storage cars, without post office fixtures carry?

10 to 15 tons.

BLAKE'S VISIONS.

The Curious Hallucinations of the Post-Painter.

William Blake, the contemporary of Charles Lamb, was a man of visions. Blake dined with prophets and held converse with archangels. A friend of Blake called on the poet-painter and found him sitting, pencil in hand, drawing a portrait with all the seeming anxiety of a man who is conscious of having a fastidious sitter. He looked and drew and drew and looked, yet no living soul was visible. "Disturb me not," said Blake in a whisper. "I have some one sitting to me!" "Sitting to you?" exclaimed the astonished visitor. "Where is he? I see no one." "But I see him!" answered Blake haughtily. "There he is. His name is Lot. You may read of him in the Scriptures. He is sitting for his portrait."

Blake's hallucinations, however, rarely took a malignant form. One of his most beautiful visitors was of a fairy funeral. "I was walking alone in my garden," he said. "There was a great stillness among the branches and flowers and more than common sweetness in the air. I heard a low and pleasant sound and knew not whence it came. At last I saw the broad leaf of a flower move, and underneath I saw a procession of creatures of the size and color of green and gray grasshoppers, bearing a body laid out on a rose leaf, which they buried with songs and then disappeared. It was a fairy's funeral!"—Chicago News.

DID PACKERS TRY TO BRIBE PROSECUTOR?

This Is the Story That Is Out In Jersey City.

New York, Feb. 25.—For at least two days it has been common talk among the jokesmiths at the court-house in Jersey City that the packing interests would send a representative on a delicate secret mission to sound Prosecutor of the Pleas Garven on the question of accepting a bribe of generous dimensions to let up on his cold storage investigation and back water on the prosecution of the directors of the National Packing company, whom the grand jury has voted to indict for conspiracy.

Reporters who visited the court-house ran into half a dozen different stories, all to the effect that an attempt had actually been made to ascertain directly from Mr. Garven if he would consent to name his figure and stop making trouble. It was said that the man who tried to feed the prosecutor was an acquaintance and that the mysterious go-between acted on the authority of two strangers who had been shipped from Chicago by the packers to serve as their agents in the fixing proceedings. The amount offered Mr. Garven, according to the various versions, was all the way up to $1,000,000. Nobody in the prosecutor's office denied the bribe story. Garven sent word from his office to waiting newspaper men that he was too busy to see them.

First Assistant George T. Vickers was requested to ask Mr. Garven to explain why in case any person tried to offer him a bribe he did not arrest him on the spot. Mr. Vickers entered the prosecutor's private office and a minute later reappeared as the bearer of this statement: "Mr. Garven says, 'The propriety of making an arrest under the circumstances did not arise.'"

The grand jury will go into open court today to hand up to Supreme Court Justice Swayne the indictments which it voted to find against all but one of the directors of the packing company.

Kidney Troubles Attack Cloverport Men and Women, Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize young and old. Men have lame and aching backs. Children suffer in their early years—Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain. Women worry, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. The cure for man woman or child. Is to cure the cause—the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys—

Cure all forms of kidney suffering. The following testimony proves it. Mr. Ann E. Dittman, 619 Crittenden St., Owensboro, Ky., says: "My son, aged sixteen years, was troubled by weak kidneys. He was compelled to pass the kidney secretions frequently, which was indeed very embarrassing to him. We read of Doan's Kidney Pills and seeing what other people were saying of them, we decided to give them a trial. They have removed the difficulty entirely and he is now in good health."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McBarn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

COURT THREATENED

Letter Written in Italian Was Sanguinarily Embellished. New York, Feb. 25.—Judge Ray of the United States district court, who presided at the trial of Ignazio Lupo and his gang of Sicilian counterfeiter and sent them to prison for terms ranging from thirty to fifteen years, received while the trial was on what purported to be a Black Hand letter written in Italian and saying, in rough translation: "If the prisoners are not liberated you will die like a dog. We have killed better men than you or Smith or Flynn."

Smith is Abel I. Smith, the assistant United States district attorney, who prosecuted. Flynn is Captain W. J. Flynn of the local federal secret service, who arrested the Sicilians. The text of the letter was reinforced with sketches in ink of a heart pierced with a dagger and drops of blood falling from the wound. Two revolvers were drawn pointed at the bleeding heart and a black hand was drawn conspicuously. The letter was posted in this city. Judge Ray turned it over to the postoffice inspector.

After a heavy meal, take a couple of Doan's Regulators, and give your stomach, liver and bowels the help they will need. Regulators bring easy, regular passages of the bowels.

Appreciates The Notice.

My dear Mr. Babbage: We received a February 23rd issue of "The Breckenridge News," and note the nice things you say about our Catalog, which we appreciate very highly, coming from such a good Critic. We have already commenced to feel the good results from our work. With kindest regards, we remain, Very truly yours, Louisville Paper Co.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY

Senate Much Impressed With General Gordon's Farewell Address. Washington, Feb. 25.—One of the most interesting and unusual events of recent occurrence in the senate was the farewell address of Senator James Gordon of Mississippi, who has been serving by the appointment of the governor since the death of Senator McLaurin, and whose successor has recently been elected by the Mississippi legislature. The address was out of the ordinary.

It dealt with war reminiscences of personal experiences and was enlivened by occasional dashes of humor and at times, when it appealed for a cessation of sectional feelings, was pathetic. Senators crowded around their Mississippi colleague and many of them applauded his remarks. Senator Depew made response, expressing the regret of the senate at the retirement of General Gordon.

Itching, torturing skin eruption, disfigure, annoy, drive one wild. Doan's Ointment brings quick relief and lasting cures. Fifty cents at any drug store.

Greatly Appreciated.

The Louisville Times published in its issue of February 19, last, a very well written and attractive article, telling of the prominent and gifted Kentucky women, who are engaged in journalism. Its author is Miss Louise Babbage, who herself comes well within that description. The article has elicited much favorable comment from a number of newspapers. Miss Babbage is a charming personality as well as a gifted, talented writer, and she is known as "The Sweetheart of Kentucky Press," a somewhat too collective title perhaps for the unattached editors of the State. The Leader wishes her great success in her chosen field of Journalism.—Fourth District Leader.

Franks of Language. A peculiar kind of blundering known as "folk etymology" is responsible for some of the queerest fronts of language. An easy example will make this clear. Our American word "carryall" for a kind of vehicle is not a compound of "carry" and "all," but a slight distortion of the French "carriole," a diminutive car. The change was made in obedience to the universal tendency to assimilate the unknown to the known, to make words mean something by associating them with others which they resemble in sound. Often there is no etymological relation between the words associated, as when sparrowgrass is made out of asparagus. This particular corruption was once in such good colloquial use that Walker, the lexicographer, wrote, "Sparrowgrass is so general that asparagus has an air of stiffness and pedantry."

SHE READ HIS SECRET.

Which Led Him to Express an Opinion on Married Life.

A young man from Kansas City was talking to a young woman from the same town whom he had met by accident at a matinee in New York. The young woman was married. The young man was—

"You've heard that we're to have a new theater back home?" the woman asked to make conversation.

"Oh, of course," the young man answered. "I get all the news. I get a letter from Kansas City every day."

The woman began to laugh.

"So when you go back home for that vacation you're going to be married?" she inquired.

"How did you know that?" the man cried. "We both said we wouldn't tell. And now she's—"

"You told me yourself a few seconds ago, everything but the date," she answered. "You see, no matter how fond your father may be of you or your uncles or aunts or your mother or father, none of these could send you a letter every day. There's only one person who writes a letter every day, and that's a girl who's engaged to be married. For the rest of my sentence I added two and two."

"You're right," the man mused. "Say, a married man must have to play close to the bases. It must be like living with a mind reader."—Boston Herald.

A CHILD GENIUS.

Amperre Dabbled in Mathematics at the Age of Three.

Amperre, who left his name to the science of electricity, was a child genius. At the age of three he had taught himself to count with the aid of pebbles and had found out for himself a good many of the theories of arithmetic. At this age he became very ill and was for three days denied food. At the end of the fast he was given a biscuit, but instead of eating it he broke it up into pieces to count with, an operation he considered more interesting.

He read everything with avidity. His mind did not run in one channel, and he welcomed every volume that came in his way. When he was ten or twelve years old he went to a library to ask for the works of a certain author. The librarian told him in amusement that the books were in Latin. The boy went home chagrined, for he did not know Latin, being a sickly child and had been from books as far as possible, but after six weeks he appeared again and told the librarian he had learned to read the books now.

Amperre is one of the few child prodigies who seems to have been sickly. He had fits from time to time, while most child wonders appear to have been physically normal in every respect.—Exchange.

His Critic.

What astounds the visiting Briton most is the manner in which every kind of immigrant to the United States adapts himself to the prevailing ideas about Englishmen. In the course of conversation with the noble Italian who condescends to brighten shoes the visitor informed the hostblack that he was an Englishman—and Englishmen had a great respect for Italians and had entertained Garibaldi in grand style.

"Ingles!" Ha, ha! Ingleses!" said Diego in soft, musical tones. "Ha! They spile no good. They dropa da hatch!"—Exchange.

Doctors Failed Again—The Great Kidney Remedy Saved Him.

McMinnville, Tenn., July 31st, 1909.

Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Gentlemen—About ten years ago I suffered severely with inflammation of the neck of the bladder and was also troubled considerably nights by numerous desires to urinate.

One night I was compelled to get up from my bed nineteen times. I had several doctors but their prescriptions seemed to have but little effect. At last upon the recommendation of a friend I tried Swamp-Root and found immediate relief.

I began to get well after the first half dozen doses, and am now in an ordinary stage of good health. I consider Swamp-Root cured me and I believe it is a fine tonic and an unrivaled bladder remedy. You may publish this statement at any time or place you may wish.

Yours very truly,

M. T. Bostick. Subscribed and sworn to before me in my office at McMinnville, Tenn., this July 31st, 1909.

THIRTEENTH TERM MAY BE UNLUCKY.

Word comes from Washington that Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson's service in President Taft's cabinet is to be brief. The retirement of Secretary Wilson is believed to be imminent because of his testimony in the Ballinger-Pinchot hearing before the Congressional committee. On the stand the Secretary clearly showed that his management of the department was very inconsistent during the controversy between the Forestry Bureau and Secretary Ballinger. And too, the letter that Secretary Wilson trusted Pinchot to write to Senator Dooliver on "department matters", caused much damage from the fact that it contained an attack on the President.

This insult to the President having been delivered and read in the Senate, threw a dangerous light upon Secretary Wilson as well as Pinchot, which may soon develop as the secret of Wilson's expected resignation.

Secretary Wilson is 75 and his ambition to serve in the Cabinet longer than any other man is being gratified for he is now serving his thirteenth year. No wonder he was not alert in the Ballinger-Pinchot affair!

Pigeon Roost, Slick Creek, "Africa", The Chute, Tin-Can Alley and Eastland on the East Side and Cowheel, St. Rose Court, Breckenridge Addition and The Hill on the West Side, are of little importance to the news gatherers of Cloverport at present. Shantytown at the mouth of Clover creek is crowded with interesting and popular visitors. The iron boat anchored there last week and every one is busy gathering together old stoves, coal buckets and old rags to sell to the rubbage man. One woman, whom we had always considered an excellent financial manager for her husband's and son's coats last week by selling him several of her husband's and son's coats for the minute sum of 26 cents. Any colored man would have quickly paid her no less than one dollar for each garment. There seems to be a peculiar fascination in trading with the iron man.

We are always glad to welcome the rubbage man for he clears the

The Facts About Pe-ru-na.

Is Peruna an alcoholic beverage in disguise? Is it possible to use Peruna as a substitute for whiskey? Do people buy Peruna and use it as a toddy, or a bitters, or a bracer?

It would be the easiest thing in the world for any one to demonstrate the falsity of such statements. Let any one go to the drug store and purchase a bottle of Peruna. Let him undertake to use it as a beverage, or take this remedy in doses considerably larger than those prescribed on the bottle. Would the result be alcoholic intoxication? Nothing of the sort. Let any one try it and see.

Peruna is a medicinal compound quite heavily loaded with medicinal ingredients. If taken in doses larger than prescribed it would produce a positive drug effect. No one could take it as a beverage. If any one doubts these statements, try it and see. We know that Peruna cannot be used as a beverage; that it will not intoxicate; that it cannot be used as a substitute for liquors. We guarantee that PERUNA CONTAINS NO CHEAP WHISKEY—OR ANY OTHER WHISKEY, for that matter.

It contains a small per cent. of cognac spirits, absolutely essential to dissolve and hold in solution medicinal ingredients, but the drugs contained in Peruna prohibit its use as a beverage. It would be the easiest thing in the world for any one to demonstrate this if they chose to do so.

Peruna is sold everywhere. THE INGREDIENTS ARE PLAINLY PRINTED ON EACH BOTTLE. It has been said over and over again that chemists have analyzed Peruna and found it to contain only cubes and whiskey. Now we challenge any chemist to demonstrate any such statement. Let any one who has even a smattering knowledge of chemistry purchase a bottle of Peruna and see whether or not it contains whiskey, find out for himself whether or not it is composed of cheap whiskey and cubes. Of course, cubes is one of the ingredients of Peruna, but there are many other ingredients. It contains hydrastis canadensis, corydalis formosa, colinssonina, and at least four other medicinal ingredients. To be sure, no chemist could so analyze Peruna as to be able to identify the various medicinal ingredients. This is beyond the ability of any chemist. But any ordinary chemist would be able to say that Peruna is heavily loaded with medicinal ingredients of some kind in addition to cubes.

Now why are these statements repeated when their falsity could be so easily demonstrated? Simply because there is continued hostility toward Peruna on the part of the medical profession. Very likely the magazines which took up the crusade against Peruna and denounced it as a cheap beverage were misled by statements of the medical profession. Probably they were sincere in their attitude towards it. But now, after all these things have been said and refuted, it would seem to be in order for such people to use a little fairness and common sense in the matter.

Every time any one says that Peruna is nothing but cheap whiskey and cubes he is telling a lie, an absolute falsehood. Most people intend to speak the truth. But the prevalent habit of repeating other people's statements, without investigation as to their truth, has led many well-meaning people to say these false things about Peruna.

Used according to the directions on the bottle, PERUNA IS A SAFE AND RELIABLE CATARRH REMEDY, but, like any other good medicine, if taken in excess of those doses, it will produce drug effects very unpleasant to the person who takes it.

It is therefore up to every honest person to quit making such statements concerning Peruna, or acknowledge that he is repeating slanders about which he knows nothing. One might just as well say that Castor Oil is an intoxicant; that if taken in large enough doses it will operate as a "booze." If people never tried to see, but simply repeated such statements about Castor Oil, the majority of people would come to believe them. It is no easier to demonstrate such a statement about Castor Oil than it would be about Peruna.

Any one who takes Peruna knows that such statements are false. To say that Peruna is cheap whiskey and cubes may constitute good material for jokes on the vaudeville stage, but there is no excuse for any one who pretends to be truthful saying over again this old-repeated falsehood.

It would be very wise for the magazine lovers to write to Congressman Ben Johnson to push the Carter Bill which for the second time is now presented to Congress. This bill provides for imperative needed reforms in the Post-office Department that will be necessary before the magazines get a square deal. If this sorely needed legislation is not forced, we who subscribe for the magazines will have to foot the postage bills for the publications. The government is needlessly extravagant in sending out so much printed matter that is never opened after it reaches its destination and is only a bunch of mail that is expensive for the government to handle. The increase of postage rate that falls on our magazines is outrageous and we, as a people, should not allow it. Courteous letters written to Congressman Ben Johnson will receive consideration and everyone, by all means, should request him to look after the Carter Bill.

Col. Henry Watterson says, and 'tis true, that "It is measures, not men, that stir our wrath. It is the one-party power that we contest. The country needs every once in a while a change of parties. It needs a change now for the sake of the change. On general principles, the Republicans need a good licking. They need it especially to recall them to the sense that there is a country, a people and a God."

A copy of the March number of the Taylor-Trotwood magazine came to our desk this week, and we are pleased to mention it to our readers as one of the most delightful publications we know. Its success is the greatest that has ever happened in the literary circles of the South.

The Lure of the Mask

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

What humans are chiefly hunting for nowadays is inspiration in one form or another. The story cannot fail to give its reader inspiration, and therefore its value can hardly be overestimated. The magic of the love of man for woman, that, aroused simply by the sound of a voice, causes a young millionaire to cross oceans and traverse foreign lands to find his fate was never better pictured. The story is intensely romantic and alluringly mysterious. The treacherous evils of unwise marriage with foreign "noblemen" are cleverly shown, and the familiar Italian brand of intrigue is laid bare. The author shows that the reward of patience and purity is happiness and that the wages of sin is death. He makes you laugh when he pictures the adventures of an American comic opera troupe stranded in foreign lands. He makes you thrill with the wanderlust when he describes La Bella Napoli and the vine covered slopes that rim the Mediterranean.

CHAPTER I
THE VOICE IN THE FOG.

OUT of the unromantic night out of the somber blurring January fog came a voice lifted in song, a soprano, rich, full and round, young, yet matured, sweet and mysterious as a night bird's, haunting and elusive as the murmur of the sea in a shell—a lit from "La Fille de Mme. Angot," a light opera long since forgotten in New York. Hillard, genuinely astounded, lowered his pipe and listened. The voice rose and sank and soared again, drawing nearer and nearer. It was joyous and unstrained, and there was youth in it, the touch of spring and the breath of flowers. The music was Levoct's—that is to say, French—but the tongue was of a country which Hillard knew to be the garden of the world. Presently he observed a shadow emerge from the yellow mist, to come within the circle of light, which, faint as it was, flamed in against the nothingness beyond the form of a woman. She walked directly under his window.

As the invisible came suddenly out of the future to assume distinct proportions which either make or mar us, so did this unknown creature come out of the fog that night and enter into Hillard's life, to readjust its ambitions, to divert its aimless course, to give impetus to it and a directness which hitherto it had not known.

"Ah!"

He leaned over the sill at a perilous angle, the bright coil of his pipe spilling comet-wise to the airway below. He was only subconscious of having spoken, but this syllable was sufficient to spoil the enchantment. The voice ceased abruptly, with an odd break. The singer looked up. Possibly her astonishment surpassed even that of her audience. For a few minutes she had forgotten that she was in New York; she had forgotten the pain in her heart; there had been only an irresistible longing to sing.

Though she raised her face, he could distinguish no feature, for the light was behind. However, he was a man who made up his mind quickly. Brunette or blond, beautiful or otherwise, it needed but a moment to find out. Even as this decision was made he was in the upper hall, taking the stairs two at a bound. He ran out into the night bareheaded. Up the street he saw a flying shadow. Plainly she had anticipated his impulse. She was gone. He cupped his ear with his hand in vain. There was nothing but fog and silence.

"Well, if this doesn't beat the Dutch!" he murmured.

He laughed disappointedly. It did not matter that he was three and thirty. He still retained youth enough to feel chagrined at such a trivial defeat. Here had been something like a genuine adventure, and it had slipped like water through his clumsy fingers.

"Deuce take the fog! But for that I'd have caught her."

But reason promptly asked him what he should have done had he caught the singer. Yes, supposing he had, what excuse would he have had to offer? Who could she be? What peculiar whimsical freak had sent her singing past his window at 1 o'clock of the morning? A grand opera singer returning home from a late supper? But he dismissed this opinion even as he advanced it. He knew something about grand opera singers. They attend late suppers, it is true, but they ride home in luxurious carriages and never risk their golden voices in this careless if romantic fashion. As for being a comic opera star, he refused to admit the possibility, and he relegated this well satisfied constellation to the darks of limbo. He had heard a voice.

A policeman came lumbering over to add or subtract his quota of interest in the affair. His golden voice stopped and waited for him.

"I heard a woman singin'," the guardian of the law said roughly.

"So did I."

"Huh! See her?"

"For a moment," Hillard admitted. "Well, we can't have none o' this in the streets. It's disorderly."

"My friend," said Hillard, rather annoyed at the policeman's tone, "you don't think for an instant that I was directing this opera?"

"Think? Where's your hat?"

Hillard ran his hand over his head. The policeman had him here. "I did not bring it out."

"Too warm and summery, huh? It don't look good. I've been watchin' these parts for a leddy. They call her Leddy Lightfinger, an' she has some o' the gear's done to a pulp when it comes to liftin' jools an' trinkets. Somebody fergits to lock the front door, an' she finds it out. Why did you come out without yer hat?"

"Just forgot it, that's all."

"Which way'd she go?"

"You'll need a map and a search-light. I started to run after her myself. I heard a voice from my window; I saw a woman; I made for the street; niente!"

"Niente, nothing?"

"Oh, I see—dago. Seems to me now that this woman was singin' Italian tunes. They were nearin' the light, and the policeman gazed intently at the hatless young man. "Why, it's Mr. Hillard! I'm surprised. Well, well! Some day I'll run in a bunch of these chorus leddies, jes' for a lesson. They git lively at the restaurants over on Broadway, an' then they raise the dead with their singin', which often as not is anything but singin'. An' here it is after 1!"

"But this was not a chorus lady," replied Hillard, thoughtfully reaching

Out of the somber fog came a voice lifted in song.

Into his vest for a cigar. "The lady had a singing voice."

"Huh! They ain't think alike about that. But mebbe she wasn't bad at the business. Anyhow—"

"It was rather out of time and place, eh? helpfully."

"That's about the size of it. This Leddy Lightfinger is a case. She has an' all thinkin' on our nights off. Clevver an' educated an' jabbers in half a dozen tongues. It's a thousand to the man who jugs her. But she don't sing; at least they ain't any report to that effect. Perhaps your leddy was jes' larkin' a bit. But it's got to be stopped."

Hillard passed over the cigar, and

OWES HER LIFE TO LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was troubled with falling and inflammation, and doctors said I could not get well unless I had an operation. I knew I could not stand the strain of one, so I wrote to you sometime ago about my health and you told me what to do. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I am to-day a woman!"—MRS. WILLIAM ABBEY, 988 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaint, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

The policeman bit off the end, nodding with approval at such foresight. "Didn't get a peep at her face?"

"Not a single feature. The light was behind her."

"Ah! how was she dressed?"

"In fog, for all I could see."

"On the level now, didn't you know who she was?" The policeman gave Hillard a sidig in the ribs with his club.

"On my word!"

"Some swell, mebbe."

"Undoubtedly a lady. That's why it looks odd—why it brought me into the street. She sang in classic Italian. And, what's more, for the privilege of bearing that voice again I should not mind sitting on this cold curb till the milkman comes around in the morning."

"That wouldn't be for long," laughed the policeman, taking out his watch and holding it close to the end of his cigar. "Twenty minutes after 1. Well, I must be gettin' back to me beat. Been to Italy?"

"I was born there," patiently.

"Not you, you're no dago!"

"Not so much as an eyelash. The story happened to drop the basket there, that's all."

"Ha, I see! Well, America is good enough for me an' mine," complacently.

"I dare say."

"An' if this story continues to behave we'll say no more about the 'yashin' leddy.' The policeman stroled off, his suspicious in nowise removed. He knew many rich young bachelors like Hillard. If he wasn't a chorus lady it was a prima donna, which was not far from being the same thing.

Hillard regained his room and leaned with his back to the radiator. He had an idea. It was rather green and salad, but as soon as his hands were warm he determined to put this idea into immediate use. The voice had stirred him deeply, stirred him with the longing to hear it again, to learn what extraordinary impulse had loosed the song.

Never the winter came with its weary round of rain and fog and snow that his heart and mind did not fly over the tedious southern sea to the land of his birth if not of his blood—Sorrento, that jewel of the sun bathed cliffs!

With a quick gesture of both hands—Latin, always Latin—he crossed the room to a small writing desk, turned on the lights and sat down. After several attempts he realized that the letter he had in mind was not the simplest to compose. There were a dozen futile efforts before he produced anything like satisfaction. Then he filed out a small check. A little later he stole downstairs, around the corner to the local branch of the postoffice and returned. It was a bit of a blind throw, such as dicers sometimes make in the dark. But chance loves her true gamester, and to him she makes a faithful servant.

He picked up a novel. "I should be sorely tempted to call any other man a silly ass. Leddy Lightfinger—it turned out to be a fine joke if my singer turned out to be that irregular person."

He fell to reading, but soon yawned. He shed the book into a corner, drew off his boots and cast them into the hall. A moment after his valet appeared, gathered up the boots and waited.

"I want nothing, Giovanni. I have only been around to the postoffice."

"I heard the door open and close four times, signor."

"It was I. This fog does not change I shall want my riding breeches to morrow morning."

"It always rains here," Giovanni remarked.

"Not always. There are pleasant days in the spring and summer. It is because this is not Italy. The Highlander wonders how any reasonable being can dwell in a country where they do not drink gin. It's home, Giovanni. It's just as you from a different angle here. There is nothing more. You may go. It is 2 o'clock, and you are dead for sleep."

But Giovanni only bowed. He did not stir.

"It is seven years now, signor."

"So it is—seven this coming April."

"I am now an American citizen and may return to my good Italia without danger."

"That depends. If you do not run across any official who recognizes you."

Giovanni spread his hands. "Official memory seldom lasts so long as seven years. The signor has crossed four times in this period."

"I would gladly have taken you each time, as you know."

"Ah, yes. But in two or three years the police do not forget. In seven it is different."

"Ah!" Hillard was beginning to understand the trend of this conversation. "So, then, you wish to return?"

"Yes, signor. I have saved a little money."

"Seven years you have received fifty American dollars every month and out of it you do not seem as much poorer contented. I am certain that you have much more to send away in your stocking a fortune."

"I buy the medicine for the elements' boots," gravely.

Hillard saw the twinkle in the thick eyes. "I have never," he said truthfully, "asked you to thank my boots."

"Ehence, signor, I cannot for me. We are Romans out there. We despise the cities, and we do not hold out our palms for the traveler's pennies. I am a peasant, but always remember the blood of the Caesars. Who can say? Besides, I have had a sword for the church. I owe no allegiance to the puny house of Savoy! There was no twinkle in the black eyes now. There was a ferocious gleam. "Pardon, signor. I grow beautiful. I am old and should know better. But does the signor return to Italy in the spring?"

"I don't know, Giovanni! I don't know. But what's on your mind?"

"Nothing new, signor, with eyes cast down to hide the returning lights."

"You are a bloodthirsty ruffian!" said Hillard shortly.

"I am as the good God made me. Besides, the holy father will do something for one who fought for the cause."

"He will certainly not countenance bloodshed, Giovanni!"

"He can absolve it."

"I was in hopes you had forgotten."

"Forgotten! The signor will never understand. She was so pretty and youthful and innocent! She sang like the nightingale. Up with the dawn, to sleep with the stars. We

"Seven years! It is a long time to wait!" were alone, she and I. The sheep supported me, and she sold her roses and dried lavender. It was all so beautiful—until—until he came. Ah, had he loved her! But a plaything, a pastime! The signor never had a daughter. What is she now? A nameless thing in the streets!" Giovanni raised his arms tragically. The boots clattered to the floor. "Seven years! It is a long time for one of my blood to wait!"

Kentucky School Teachers and Normal Training.

Present and prospective teachers of Breckenridge and adjoining counties are invited to consider the new Normal Department of Kingswood College.

Special up-to-date normal training is offered here under particular favorable environments.

Normal students have advantages of good musical instructions, good Literary Societies, and the inspiration and stimulus of advanced college associations; and, in addition, will be allowed one or more studies in the collegiate department—free of charge.

Our second term begins January 1, 1910. Much of this term will be devoted to the preparation of teachers for practical work in the common schools.

The principal of this department seeks to find out wherein each pupil is deficient, then to supply the needed help.

Persons who do well the normal work at Kingswood, may expect to pass in the county and state examinations, and to succeed in the profession of teaching.

We do no cramming here, but good, honest and thorough work. Tuition in this department ($80), twenty dollars per term.

REPORT OF TAX COMMISSION TO GOVERNOR OF KENTUCKY

As a matter of fact, in most cases he will compromise with his conscience by not listing the bond at all, seeking to justify himself on the ground that the tax upon it amounts to confiscation. He is thereby encouraged in evading the law and, in effect, if not in actuality, perjury himself. Virtually the only bonds that are listed for taxation are those in the hands of administrators, guardians, or trustees, belonging to dependent people, and which have come to them from estates of husbands or fathers, so that their ownership has become a matter of public record through laws governing the appraising and settling of estates. While these people, who can ill afford to bear the unjust burden, pay in full on their holdings of this class of property, the many millions of dollars in bonds, belonging to wealthy men, almost wholly escape taxation. The flagrant injustice of this practical exemption needs no argument. It cannot be remedied under the existing laws. To attempt to exact from any class of property in taxes so large a proportion of its income is to defy both an economic law and a law of human nature. Other ways can be found of requiring owners of bonds to pay a reasonable tax upon their holdings, but that way does not lie along the lines of the general property tax system of which Kentucky is now bound. With proper latitude in treatment of this matter given to the Legislature by amendment to the Constitution, as herein recommended, it will be possible to adopt such methods as will greatly reduce the evasion of taxation by bondholders and will steadily increase listing of this class of property for taxation at a reasonable rate.

It is an axiom of taxation that when a tax exceeds 5 or 6 per cent of the income from property it is burdensome, and when it approaches 8 or 10 per cent it becomes unbearable, and when it exceeds 10 per cent it fails to produce an increase of revenue in proportion to the increase of rate. There is a general agreement among revenue commissioners, tax experts and political economists that from property of this character a larger actual revenue is realized from a lower rate. Notable examples of the success of this policy we have found in the States of Pennsylvania and Maryland. In our opinion it is especially unwise to impose a tax upon the bonds issued by the State, by counties, municipalities and school districts. No tax should be levied upon the State's own promises to pay, and the same principle should apply to the obligation of the minor civil divisions. To tax these obligations merely results in making it more difficult for the counties and town and school districts to borrow money at a reasonable rate, and to that extent discourages many necessary public improvements. We have therefore, included in our recommendation a provision exempting such bonds from taxation.

EFFECT OF THE MORTGAGE TAX.

Our plan of levying a tax upon mortgages, uniform in rate with the tax upon all other kinds of property, has had an effect probably not expected by the advocates of this system. The State law limits the rate of interest to 6 per cent. Manifestly, no private citizen will lend money at 5 or 6 per cent when he is obliged to give up nearly or quite one-half of this income in taxes. The result is that in many parts of the State the field of mortgage investment has been virtually lost to the private investor, or he is driven to risk the penalties of suit at the expense of the borrower. This has greatly restricted the amount of funds available for mortgage loans. This restriction works inconvenience, not upon the rich, but upon the poor. The rich man rarely mortgages. It is often the only way the poor man has of getting money with which to build a home, or enlarge his business, or improve his property. Instead of going into an open field to borrow money, with the chance of getting it sometimes at a lower rate of interest because of a good supply of capital available for mortgage loans, he is virtually restricted to two sources, the trust companies or State banks, and the foreign life insurance companies. The trust companies and State banks can lend without feeling the pinch of this tax rate upon the mortgages they hold, because they pay taxes upon their capital and surplus in a lump, regardless of whether their investments are in mortgages or in other assets. But trust companies are not found everywhere. It has been clearly demonstrated in New York, Massachusetts and other States that the enforcement of a tax on mortgages operates to increase the rate of interest. This burden falls, of course, upon the borrower. There is a further injustice in the taxation of mortgages as we practice it, because we tax the land in all and then tax the mortgage upon it in full, which is to the extent the amount of the mortgage, an unjust double taxation. And this adds to the burden of the borrower, because the lender will seek every possible means to throw the tax on the borrower.

No phase of the subject of taxation received more attention in the various open meetings held by our Commissioners upon the State in this question of taxation of mortgages upon real estate. At no meeting did we fail to hear protests against the system. Its injustice is everywhere asserted.

The people of Kentucky are not alone in recognizing the unfairness of such a tax. In many States, where the Constitution is less restrictive than ours, relief has been afforded in various ways. In California, Colorado, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Louisiana, mortgages on real estate are treated as an interest in the property, and mortgages are either not taxed at all, or the owners of the property are permitted to deduct the amount of the mortgage from the assessed value of the property, and the borrower or lender may enter into a contract concerning the payment of taxes, that there may be no double taxation. In New York a special tax paid on a mortgage when it is filed for record, and thereafter no tax is exacted. In Pennsylvania mortgages are taxed by the rate only and at the rate of 40 cents on the hundred dollars, the proceeds being divided between the State and counties in which the property is mortgaged is located. In Maryland, in certain counties, a tax of 8 per cent upon the interest on the mortgage is collected from the owners of the mortgage. The States of Idaho and Washington exempt mortgages from taxation by tax. In the case of Washington an exemption is by a somewhat strained construction of law on the part of the courts. Chief Justice Hadley, in delivering the opinion of the court on the subject, held that the law requires taxation to "uniform and equal" and that it is manifest that a system "which subjects some property to double taxation is not uniform [and equal] relief could not be expected in Kentucky, where the courts have ruled otherwise, so that no relief from double taxation of mortgages possible as our Constitution now stands. In Alabama, Virginia, Minnesota, as in New York, mortgages are subject to a recording at the time they are lodged for record.

HIGHWAYS OF BRICK.

Method for Constructing a Road of This Material.

GRADING IMPORTANT FACTOR

For satisfactory Results the Bed Must Be Entirely Free From Depressions Proper and Economical Way of Laying the Brick.

In an address before a recent engineering convention in Indiana on the construction of brick highways W. L. Blair said: A brick highway to be entirely satisfactory must be entirely free from depressions, every part conforming to the grade. This result must be anticipated in the preparation of the sand cushion, first spread at the estimated depth of two inches and these depressions avoided by the use of a hand roller weighing from 300 to 400 pounds, additional sand applied and screeded again at least three times. At the last screening it will be found that the uncompacted sand will not be over one-quarter inch in depth at any one point.

It is certain also that in leveling out what few depressions remain and compacting the brick into the cushion but very little sand will be pushed into the interstices by the final rolling. The brick should be dropped in straight lines upon the sand cushion, with the best edge of the brick uppermost. Economy for the contractor would require that the brick be brought to and deposited within reach of the person who actually lays the brick in a way that will accommodate his method of dropping them in place, insuring the best edge uppermost. But previous to dropping the brick in the street attention must be given to the necessary provision for the expansion cushion next to the curb.

The board should be prepared by leveling a joint eight inches in width, the thickness determined largely by the width of the street. Even in a narrow street the expansion cushion should not be less than one inch, one and one-quarter inches for a thirty foot street and one and one-half inches for a width exceeding thirty feet. This board should be placed next to the curb, worked slightly into the sand cushion before the brick are laid and remain until the street is finished in all other respects, after which it should be removed within twenty-four hours following the application of the cement filler.

After the brick are dropped into the street surface should be swept, precaution therefore exercised that no brick go into the street which are dirty, or, after, in that they are not made so by use, as it is impossible for the cement filler to adhere to a dirty surface. After the sweeping (thorough rolling must take place by the use of a roller not weighing over five tons.

The filler shall be composed of one part of clean, sharp sand and one part of portland cement. The sand should be dry. The mixture, not exceeding one-third bushel of the sand, together with a like amount of cement, shall be placed in the box and mixed dry until the mass assumes an even and unbroken shade. Then water shall be added until the mixture is of the consistency of thick cream.

From the time the water is applied until the last drop is removed and floated into the joints of the brick pavement the mixture must be kept in constant motion.

To avoid the possibility of thickening at any point there should be a man with a sprinkling can, the head perforated with small holes, sprinkling the surface ahead of the sweepers. Within one-half to three-quarters of an hour after this last coat is applied and the joint between the joints has fully assumed the final set the surface will be slightly sprinkled and all surplus mixture left on the tops of the brick swept into the joints.

After the joints are thus filled flush with the top of the brick and sufficient time for hardening has elapsed, so that the setting of the filler coat has absorbed any moisture from the cement mixture, one-half inch of sand shall be spread over the whole surface, and in case of hot weather it shall be in a hot summer sun an occasional sprinkling, sufficient to dampen the sand, should be followed for two or three days.

The last steps upon which depend the highest possibilities of the brick street are the proper rolling of the brick after they are in the street and the fronting out of any slight depressions found to exist.

Conscious During a Fall.

Every time a workman falls from a forty-story building there are people to say, "Well, probably didn't get hurt when he struck." There is little or no basis for this belief that a person is dead or unconscious at the end of a fall of 40 stories. In fact, jumpers from Brooklyn bridge prove this, that a person retains consciousness is shown by the case of the English boy who fell down a pit some 250 feet deep and shouted "Below" three times on the way down. One theory is that a person falling would not be able to breathe, but that if he falls in an hour is moving faster than one would believe in falling a hundred or so feet, and no one pretends that one would be conscious in a fall of 40 stories. The man who fell from his head out the train window—Eschwege.

The Manchus. The name "Manchuria" to designate the country of the Manchus, is not known to the Chinese, but was invented by French geographers. The Manchus are a tribe of Tartars who fell down a pit some 250 feet deep and shouted "Below" three times on the way down. One theory is that a person falling would not be able to breathe, but that if he falls in an hour is moving faster than one would believe in falling a hundred or so feet, and no one pretends that one would be conscious in a fall of 40 stories. The man who fell from his head out the train window—Eschwege.

The Manchus resemble the Chinese only to the eye of a stranger, just as we think that all Chinese laundrymen look alike. To themselves the Manchus are distinct from Chinamen in appearance, as in race, and one who knows eastern races easily distinguishes them. Most of them are short and good looking, with brown and ruddy skins—New York Tribune.
